

Moment of realisation

Singularity com-prehends its ownmost difference from itself as green, and blue, and red; and inasmuch as each are the others' constituents, it becomes self-aware as them. Each is therefore real for itself by being different from itself ~ as Myself. Singularity is self-aware as green, and blue, and red, and so each is not only real for itself but real as the other two being real for themselves at the same elementary moment of the object:

Elementary moment of the object

At the elementary moment of an object, the constitution of Myself is no longer simply its ownmost difference from itself, but is also the pure exteriority of itself from alterity. In other words, each moment of under-standing has realised that it's not alone, and has become real by com-prehending the other two ~ which it grasps together as its constitution. Thus, at the elementary moment of the object, the constitution of each Myself is as a third-dimensional spacing with alterity. Space is the very com-prehending of alterity as My constitution; but although space appears to be ~ IS ~ real for Myself because of that, spacing exists only as My constitutional difference from others. Space is actually the third-dimensional apparition of a two dimensional singularity of understanding.

Space is My com-prehending with other Myselfs ~ in this case an alterity of two, all of which have, as that very moment, identical constitutions; and as we shall see, this congruence means that space has the potential to expand.
