

In the image above, we can see that although Aidan is dying, he is seeing the physical objects around him with increasing insight. No longer does he grasp their differences from each other, but as he gazes into the waterstone's rippling waves, his objective com-prehending in space and time is taken on an ebbing tide, to reveal an understanding of his ownmost singularity as a thing.